

iCivics develops innovative video games, lesson plans, and other educational resources to prepare middle and high school students for active, responsible citizenship. Founded by retired Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor to reverse the decline in civic education and participation of American youth, iCivics has become a leader in civic and digital learning and is growing rapidly.

iCivics is currently looking for a highly motivated, talented, and detail-oriented intern to provide assistance on a variety of fast-paced projects. Successful interns will have the opportunity to hone their skills in an area of their own professional and academic interests. Options include curriculum development, video game content writing, web design, marketing, communications, donor relations, and non-profit operations. This is a very flexible opportunity for an ambitious and creative intern.

Create exciting new civics games!

Provide feedback on existing features!

iCivics offers a semester-long internship with the opportunity for extension. iCivics offers a team-focused, collegial work environment located in downtown Washington, DC. Interns receive ongoing support and are routinely asked to provide feedback on important program initiatives. Interns will work alongside and learn from leaders in the fields of educational technology, gaming, and curriculum development. iCivics interns and staff work hard and play hard, which allows for the development of innovative and exciting civics education products.

iCivics requires interns with an entrepreneurial spirit and flexibility. To succeed, interns must embrace experimentation and rapid change. Finally, iCivics interns must have a passion for enabling youth to participate in democracy and civil society.

For immediate consideration, please send a cover letter and resume to jobs@icivics.org.

Help design new content!